

Overview

Apprentices do real jobs for real employers. If you are entering work for the first time, you will start earning from day one of your Apprenticeship so you're paid while you learn. Apprenticeships can be demanding but they are also very rewarding. Because Apprenticeships train you in the skills employers want, they give you more opportunities in your chosen field and open new doors in your career.

Your Business

Apprenticeships can help businesses across all sectors by offering a route to harness fresh new talent. Apprenticeships ensure that your workforce has the practical skills and qualifications your organisation requires now and in the future.

Apprenticeships deliver real returns to your bottom line, with Apprenticeships helping to improve productivity and competitiveness. Training apprentices can also be more cost effective than hiring skilled staff, leading to lower overall training and recruitment costs.

What is an Apprenticeship?

An Apprenticeship is essentially a set of qualifications - called a 'framework' - developed by Sector Skills Councils. Most Apprenticeship frameworks follow a standard format that comprises:

- A National Vocational Qualification (NVQ)
- Transferable skills, such as key skills and functional skills
- A knowledge-based qualification, such as a BTEC.

Through this process the Apprentice develops skills and knowledge, while the employer provides the practical experience to put those skills to the test. Training can be classroom based, in a workshop or in a workplace, depending on the subject and on the learning provider.
